Dr. Marcus Learnaby is a loving, caring, highly skilled surgeon to his patients and those who work under him. To his wife and young son, he is a dictator, a martinet of the worst kind. Could there be an even darker side to the doctor, a side which seeks death and darkness as it hides the truth? Will one detective be able to bring him face to face with his true self and end a long killing spree? Chapter One Excerpt May 18, 1834 - She walked down the narrow sloping road from Upper North Street headed for the flight of stone steps. After a long, hard night, there was hardly anybody around as the hands on the distant church-tower clock pointed at 3:14 a.m. She longed for her bed - the comfort of a lumpy, horsehair mattress. In her pocket jingled the few pennies she earned this night. Only the patrolling troopers shared the streets with her now; the patrolling troopers, stray dogs snuffling bins for leftover food-scrap, and howling tomcats on backyard fences. She moved down the long, twisting flight of steps. She would keep her nightly appointment with the dark man in the blacked-out hansom cab, hand over her earnings and receive in exchange a few pennies, enough to purchase a meal at the greasy-spoon stall. She longed for something more substantial, but knew her dreams of a solid meal, a steak in a fancy restaurant were no more than dreams. As she negotiated the last step and moved onto Lower North Street, a uniformed trooper passed her by, slowed in his regular, military pace, and looked...
