Excerpt: . . . and on the same errand; they were, the one, as near a relation of Blanch--the other, Albertis fellow soldier. and most intimate friend. Pardon had been at length granted to the young exile at the petition, of the general-officer whom he had wounded, and he Von. I. PART. II. Q A was recalled by the Empress herself to the court of Vienna. The bearers of these happy tidings immediately descended into the mines. As they approached Albertis hut, the light which glimmered through some apertures in the shattered door, induced them to look at its inmates before they entered. Though dressed in a dark, coarse garment, and wasted away to an almost incredible slowness, still enough of her former loveliness remained to tell them that the pallid female they beheld was the young Countess; and the heart admired her more, as she sat leaning-over her husband, and holding up to his kisses her small infant, her dark hair carelessly parted, and bound round her pale brow, seeming to live but in her husbands love; than when elegance vied with splendour in her attire--when her hair sparkled with diamonds, and, in full health and beauty, she was the one gazed at and admired in the midst of the noblest and fairest company of Vienna. The door was still unopened, for Blanch had begun to sing, and had chosen a song which her hearers had last listened to in her own splendid saloon on the last night she had sung there; the...
